The European Demolition Association, EDA, has put a lot of effort through the years into creating tools that analyze the evolution and trends of the demolition industry in Europe.

This is the case with the European Demolition Industry Reports. By creating this document, EDA intends to facilitate quality materials to help professionals in the industry.

Therefore, the goal of this study is to present effective resources so that the professionals of the industry are better prepared to face the future.

As always, the report includes data about the development of companies in 2021 and their forecasts for 2022, together with comparative graphs with information collected since 2015. All these illustrate a complete overview of the recent years.

To gather information, EDA provided a set of online surveys translated into several languages. These were sent to demolition suppliers and contractors around Europe.

As a result, the responses received were employed to prepare this edition of the European Demolition Industry Report.

Because of this, without the support of the demolition companies that took part in the surveys, this study wouldn't be possible. Thank you for sharing your time and expertise with us!

Overall, we sincerely hope this European Demolition Industry Report 2022 helps stakeholders to increase their knowledge of the business and build, together, a better future for the industry.
